POWDER TOWER (PRAŠNÁ BRÁNA): Powder Tower was built by Matěj Rejsek in 1475. It got its present name in the 17th century when it was used to store gunpowder.

Down Celetná street to the Old Town Square.

CELETNÁ STREET (CELETNÁ ULICE): one of the oldest streets in Prague. Do you know why it is called Celetná? Because of bread rolls! They were first baked here in the Middle Ages and they were called „calty“.

OLD TOWN SQUARE (STAROMĚSTSKÉ NÁMĚSTÍ): Prague's heart since the 12th century. The Old Town Square has been the scene of great events, both glorious and tragic. One of those tragic was an execution of the Czech lords who had led the rebellion against Emperor Ferdinand II (they were defeated in a battle at Bílá hora in 1620). The event is marked in the square pavement. Find the memorial tablet and answer the questions:

ASTRONOMICAL CLOCK (ORLOJ): it consists of three parts – the procession of Apostles, the astronomical clock and the calendar by Josef Manes. The main attraction is the hourly procession of the 12 Apostles.

There are many legends surrounding this Clock. The most famous legend is about the clockmaker Jan z Růže known as Hanuš. It is said that he built the Clock. But the Old Town Councilors had his eyes burnt out, so that he would not be able to build another clock. Master Hanus then asked his apprentice to take him to the clock, which he damaged so seriously, that nobody could repair it. In reality, the Clock was installed in 1410. But its builder wasn't Hanuš. It was Mikuláš z Kadaně.

To the Little Square behind the Old Town Hall (Staroměstská radnice).

LITTLE SQUARE (MALÉ NÁMĚSTÍ): it was a fruit market in the Middle Ages. There were also first pharmacies in Prague (1353).
